

Graham Harrison currently serves as a Program Officer in the Office of International Science and Engineering at the US National Science Foundation. His focus is on US-European cooperation.

He was a key organizer of the inaugural meeting of the Global Research Council, the Global Summit on Merit Review, which was held in Washington in May 2012. He was the inaugural Executive Secretary to the Governing Board of the Global Research Council, and is a current member of the GRC Executive Support Group.

Dr. Harrison earned a B.S. from Stanford University and a Ph.D. from the University of California Santa Barbara, both in Chemical Engineering. He conducted postdoctoral research at the University of Melbourne, Australia. Prior to joining NSF, he served on the faculty of the Department of Chemical Engineering at Clemson University in South Carolina.