

Mark Tuominen is a Professor of Physics and Co-Director of the Center for Hierarchical Manufacturing at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. He is director of the National Nanomanufacturing Network. His research interests include experimental condensed matter physics, nanotechnology and energy conversion science. Mark has also created educational innovations in nanoscience and student-lead team-based research learning pedagogy.